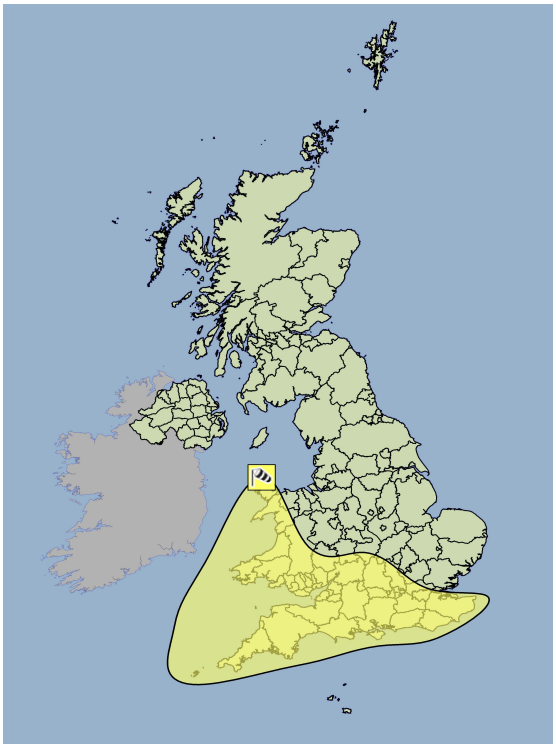
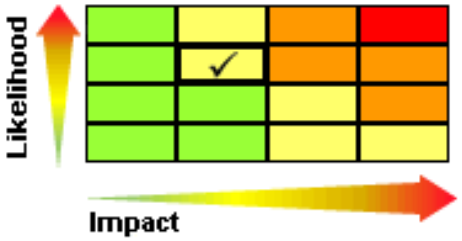
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
A vigorous area of low pressure continues to develop to the west of Ireland. It will then drift eastwards across Ireland on Thursday, reaching northern England by the end of Thursday. To the south of the low pressure a swathe of gales is likely to extend across southern Britain. The warning area has now been extended further east in the south, to cater for increasing winds here during Thursday afternoon.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Wind

Valid from 09:00 on Thu, 09th May 2013 until 21:00 on Thu, 09th May 2013

Very strong southwesterly winds for the time of year are expected to extend eastwards across much of southern England, parts of the Midlands and much of Wales. Gusts of 50 mph are likely to develop fairly widely inland with gusts of 55-65 mph along coasts.

The public should be aware that some disruption to transport is possible along with possible damage to trees.
